FOREWORD

The United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325 is premised on the important roles and responsibilities of women in constructing an enduring peace and security architectural framework. It outlines a comprehensive profile and strategic mechanisms for the protection, promotion and participation of women in peace processes. The Federal Ministry of Women Affairs and Social Development developed Nigeria's First National Action Plan on UNSCR 1325 (NAP) in 2013.

In pursuit of the same objectives, some States of the Federation equally domesticated the NAP. In the course of the NAP implementation, several gaps were observed which formed the basis, among other reasons, to review the plan in order to incorporate emerging issues in Nigeria, as well as address the gaps identified in the 1st NAP. Such gaps include:

- Non-inclusion of violent extremism & conflict issues: The 2013 NAP did not take into consideration, issues of violent extremism because around the time it was developed this was not a contemporary national issue as it has recently become.
- Limited Consideration of Post-Conflict & Reintegration issues: The document did not address demobilization and deradicalization problems and other concerns such as the reintegration of victims of insurgency, girls forced into marriage with Boko Haram members, former insurgents and abductors, Sexual and Gender Based Violence (SGBV) survivors etc. It also did not address post-conflict, reconstruction and re-integration issues including internal displacement of people particularly women and children. All of these are now major issues in the present North-east and are spreading rapidly to other geo-political zones.
- Absence of Crisis management & recovery strategies: Crisis-management & recovery is a fall-out of any conflict and as such adequate provision needs to be made within any NAP to fund and manage trauma and provide psychosocial counseling for victims of conflict to accelerate wholesome recovery.
- Ambiguous language: Some of the language of the 2013 NAP was ambiguous and unclear. For instance, under the 5P's, explanation on the Prevention of what, was not given? While some of the terms and its contents could be mis-interpreted with each other. Drawing from the African Union Commission Framework on Women, Peace and Security, the 5P's could easily be taken to mean Prevention and Disaster Preparedness, Participation and Representation, Protection & Prosecution or Crisis Management, Early Recovery and Post-Conflict Reconstruction. On the other hand, a term like Promotion presented as one (1) pillar is cross-cutting in nature and for operational purposes, it is difficult to consider as a stand-alone pillar.
- Policy & Operational gaps: Although the coordination of NAP is under the ambit of the Federal Ministry of Women Affairs and Social Development, there exists a huge challenge with regards to coordination and working cohesively with other agencies and bodies responsible for security, peace and justice. Bridging operational gaps in the coordination of stakeholders remains a challenge

- Inadequate Monitoring and Evaluation Architecture: The 2013 NAP did provide a detailed implementation plan, however, monitoring and performance evaluation was constrained.

Notwithstanding these gaps, the 1st NAP helped to highlight the need to focus on WPS issues. The review and process for developing a 2nd NAP is a clear evidence of the commitment of the Federal Government through the Federal Ministry of Women Affairs and Social Development under my humble leadership as a means for enhancing women's participation in peace processes in Nigeria. I am optimistic that this 2nd generation NAP would have a favourable and supportive environment to thrive bearing in mind that an array of partners and stakeholders were deeply involved in its design and development. This coupled with the political will of President Muhammadu Buhari's administration will certainly provide the necessary springboard for effective coordination of stakeholder efforts to realize Human Security objectives, especially at it relates to women, peace and security.

Senator Aisha Jummai Alhassan (Mrs.)
Minister, Women Affairs and Social Development
Federal Republic of Nigeria.

PREFACE

The United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325 (UNSCR 1325) passed in October 2000, reaffirms the importance of the equal participation and involvement of women in all processes of Peace Building, Peace Keeping, Conflict Resolution and Management, also calls upon States to take action towards ensuring the effective implementation of the recommendations set forth by the resolution. This is in order to allow women to play their rightful roles within national and international armed-conflict management mechanisms.

The development and expansion of the National Action Plan (NAP) for the adoption and implementation of United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325 has become imperative for the inclusion of women in peace and security processes. There is no doubt that conflict affects women and men differently. Whenever there is conflict, women and children are often the most vulnerable.

History has shown that whenever there are social upheavals or conflicts of any kind, women and children suffer abuses and human rights violations. Glaring examples of rape and killing of women and children abound during insurgencies. Women who survive these atrocities are traumatized and often live with painful memories of rape, war and death for the rest of their lives. These women suffer psychological trauma, sexually transmitted diseases, stigmatization and almost always unwanted pregnancies. They are faced with the daunting task of keeping families together after displacement and destruction of infrastructure and at the same time are expected to provide food, clothing and shelter. Even in the absence of violent conflict, women and girls live in fear of kidnapers, ravaging effect of drought, flooding and environmental insecurity that constitute threats to human survival and meaningful development in their communities.

NAP echoes government's commitment, as well as its responsibility in ensuring the security of women and girls enhancing their active and direct participation in the identifying early warning signs, conflict prevention, peace building and post conflict remedy. It provides a good road map for the implementation of UNSCR 1325 with practical operational tools for supporting those affected by armed conflicts.

The NAP is developed in ways appropriate to national context, commitments, capacity and resources, with a wide range of stakeholders. It is hopeful that, result-oriented actions backed by political will and commitment to changes, will tackle structural inequalities and exclusions, thereby providing durable and sustainable ways in achieving greater feat in the implementation of the NAP.

Permanent Secretary
Federal Ministry of Women Affairs and Social Development, Abuja.

REFLECTIONS

The review process of the National Action Plan (NAP) for the implementation of UNSCR 1325 has been a truly rich and satisfying process of consultations with various stakeholders engaged in the security sector. Extensive conversations were held with security agencies, Faith Based Organizations, government officials and development partners, both local and international. The process, therefore engendered a broad based multi-sectorial and participatory approach which culminated in the development of five key strategies for collectively engaging States and Local Government level actors on issues of women, peace and security. The implementation of the 2nd NAP would require strong political will, commitment and resources from implementing partners.

The incessant wave of insurgency and its consequence in the North East, militancy in the South-South and more recently, gendered-kidnapping and abductions with a view to using women and girls as a source of extortion has thrown up new dynamics and challenges to human security in the country. This necessitated a review of the 1st NAP and its implementation modalities. Recognising that the lifespan of the NAP was expiring in August 2016, efforts were put in place to institute a broad-based participatory approach for the development of this 2nd NAP. The process sought to build on lessons learned, address identified gaps and challenges while responding to emerging issues and new frontiers. These factors and concerns shaped the different stages of the NAP review process.

In February 2016, the then NAP Steering Committee met in Abuja and one of the outcomes of its deliberations was a call for the review of the NAP to sharpen it as a tool for meeting perceived gaps and emerging issues related to women and conflict in Nigeria. The training of stakeholders on effective monitoring and evaluation techniques was undertaken to prepare stakeholders and enhance their engagement in the review process.

The Commemoration of the 15th Anniversary of the United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325 in April 2016 had in attendance, over 400 participants from government, development partners, civil society organizations and women leaders. Gender advocates present elaborated on the need for deepened consultations on the NAP across the Nation. The concluding communique inspired consultations in the six geo-political zones and resulted in the development of States and Zonal Action Frameworks/Plans for cascading the NAP implementation to the grass root level.

As a consequence of this process, new pillars that respond to our current national realities and local contexts have been adopted. The five pillars are aligned with several international instruments including the recent United Nations General Resolution 30, the March 2017 UNSCR 2349 as well as several national documents relating to policies on gender, peace and security including the National Security Strategy.

With the level of commitment and enthusiasm demonstrated during the review process, it is highly optimistic that all hands would be on deck to ensure efficiency and effectiveness in the implementation of this 2nd NAP in the years ahead

Esther Eghobamien-Mshelia (Mrs.)
Special Assistant Technical to Hon. Minister of Women Affairs and Social Development,
Federal Ministry of Women Affairs and Social Development,
Abuja, Nigeria

1.0 INTRODUCTION

1.1 United Nations Security Council Resolution (UNSCR) 1325

The United Nations Security Council resolution 1325, unanimously passed by the Security Council on the 31st of October 2000 is the first of many resolutions on “Women, Peace and Security” (WPS). It builds on a body of international human rights laws and legal instruments. UNSCR 1325 is a ground -breaking resolution which recognizes that armed conflict impacts women differently from men. It demands protection of women and girls during armed conflict and post conflict situations. The resolution recognizes women's role as peace builders and agents of change and calls on UN and member states, civil society and the international community to ensure women's increased participation in conflict prevention, peace negotiations and all peace processes, reconstruction decisions and programs. Over the past sixteen years, the Council has adopted subsequent resolutions: 1820 (2008), 1888 (2008), 1889 (2009), 1960 (2010) 2106 (2013) 2122 (2013), 2242 (2015) and 2349 (2017) to support and strengthen UNSCR 1325.

The UNSCR 1325 stresses that peace is inextricably linked with equality between women and men and affirms the equal access and full participation of women in power structures and in all efforts geared towards peace and security as essential. The resolution is rooted in the premise that women's inclusion, participation in the process, perspectives and contributions are crucial to the dialogue and will improve the chances of attaining viable and sustainable peace. The resolution is also rooted in the knowledge that gender equality itself is a source of sustainable peace.

More recently, in October 2015, the United Nations adopted General Recommendation 30 on Women in Conflict Prevention, Conflict, and Post-Conflict Situations. The recommendation aims to ensure respect for women's human rights in all situations, not only during armed conflict, but also including internal insurrections and emergencies. The recommendation besides urging member countries to draw up action plans on women, peace and security, requires that reporting on actions taken be incorporated into the periodic reporting on the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW). This new reporting procedure will further promote cooperation with civil society and NGOs in the implementation of the WPS agenda of nations and make them accountable to the UN CEDAW Committee.

October 2015 which marked fifteen years of the implementation of UNSCR 1325 by UN Member States was also a key milestone as it witnessed the launch of the High-Level Review and Global Study Report on the Implementation of UNSCR 1325. The report showed that UNSCR 1325 has been implemented with uneven and varied global results regarding women's participation in national, regional, and international conflict prevention, conflict resolution, and peacebuilding processes. Concerted efforts at the international level to step up the prevention of crimes against women and girls, improve protection measures, and increase the participation of women in these processes have resulted in the adoption of additional regional security pacts and UN Security Council Resolutions that affirm and strengthen the implementation of UNSCR 1325.

1.2 National Action Plan (NAP)

As highlighted above, the respective UN Security Council Resolutions call on Member States to initiate action through the development of National Action Plans (NAPs), or the adoption of other national level strategies. The NAP therefore serves as a tool for governments to articulate priorities and coordinated action for the implementation of UNSCR 1325 at the national and sub-national levels. It serves as a guiding national policy document that captures the role of diverse actors among government bodies, international development partners, civil society organizations who are tasked with advancing human security as well as the foreign policy, development and gender equality agenda of the nation.

In August 2013, the Government of Nigeria, in taking forward this global charge, committed itself to addressing and responding to the immediate and long term needs of women before, during and post conflict by developing and adopting a National Action Plan on United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325 and related resolutions. The 1st NAP was designed around the five (5) pillars of Prevention, Participation, Protection, Prosecution and Promotion. As stipulated by the UN General Assembly, NAP documents are due for revision every three years. As such, through a participatory and consultative process key stakeholders took stock, highlighted gaps and shared best practices on women peace and security interventions across Nigeria. The outcome is this 2nd NAP document that reflects Nigeria's current realities with clear indicators and a monitoring and evaluation template to track performance, progress and achievements.

1.3 Background and Nigeria's Security Context

Diagram 1: Map of Nigeria

Nigeria is one of the world's major oil producers and Africa's most populous country. It is situated in the Gulf of Guinea and shares borders with Benin, Niger, Cameroun, and Chad. Nigeria was a British colonial creation. It came into being in January 1914 with the amalgamation of the Colony of Lagos (first annexed in 1861), the Southern Protectorate (established in 1885-1894) and the Northern Protectorate (pacified by 1903). Prior to the unification, the British had administered them as separate but related territories. The country which occupies a land area of 923,768Km has a population of 182 million, with women constituting 49.5% of the population. Although there has been increasing focus on diversifying the economy, it is still highly dependent on the oil and gas sector and sensitive to price fluctuations. Nigeria's GDP per capita is low and youth unemployment rose to 25% in 2016. This high youth unemployment rate has increased vulnerability of the youth to radicalization and extremists ideologies.

Nigeria gained its independence on 1st October 1960 and became a Republic within the Commonwealth in 1963. The constitution at independence provided for a federation of three autonomous regions – Northern, Western and Eastern; each with its wide-ranging powers, independent constitution, public service, and marketing boards.

In the early 1960's, the inherited regional structure led to series of inter and intra-regional crisis and conflicts in the 3 ethno-centric regions, as competition grew for control over Federal resources. The 1964 Federal elections were marred by violence and rigging. Inter-party and inter-ethnic tensions continued, ultimately leading to a military coup in January 1966. Thereafter, Nigeria's post-independence history has been marked by a series of military interventions in politics through coups, counter coups, and a civil war (1967-70) when the Eastern Region attempted to cede as the Republic of Biafra. Over 1 million persons died in the conflict. Nigeria has however enjoyed three short periods of civilian rule -1960-65, 1979-83, and 1999 to date. The intervening periods, which total 29 years, saw military governments in place.

Administratively, Nigeria operates a three-tiered Presidential system of government with the Federal Government made up of the Executive, Legislative and the Judicial arms. The thirty-six (36) states have independent Executive arms and Houses of Assemblies while each of the seven-hundred and seventy-four (774) Local Governments is administered by a Chairman and a Local Council.

Nigeria has 3 major languages- Hausa, Yoruba and Igbo with more than 450 ethno-linguistic groups. The dominant religions are Christianity, Islam and Traditional worship. Since gaining independence in 1960, Nigeria has had its fair share of conflicts arising from religious, ethnic and socio-economic causes. Despite its challenges, Nigeria is regarded as one of the African Union's powerful and influential countries. Under the umbrella of the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS), Nigeria has taken the lead in conflict resolution among African states; played peace-keeping roles in many conflict situations in Sudan, Sao Tome, Cote d' Ivoire and more recently in the Gambia. Nigeria is currently the fourth largest contributor globally to peacekeeping operations and is the first to deploy an all-female peace keeping troop.

1.4 Emerging Issues

As a nation, Nigeria faces several challenges including an economic crisis triggered mostly by low oil prices, a resurgence of militancy in the Delta over economic grievances, an uptick in agitation in the Southeast by pro-Biafra nationalists, and ongoing conflicts over land use in the Middle Belt.

The conflict in the North East caused by Boko Haram since 2009, has resulted in massive loss of lives, property and livelihoods. Over an estimated 1.8 million people have been internally displaced, with about 20,000 people killed, countless women and girls abducted and children drafted as suicide bombers. Women and girls are victims of sexual violence and assault from insurgents. In addition to the crisis, they are left to deal with devastating consequences such as HIV infections, involuntary pregnancies, motherhood and other health related complications.

There is however, a growing recognition that women in conflict situations must be viewed not only as victims, but also as powerful agents for peace and security in their communities. Women's gender roles have placed them in positions where they act as first responders in providing humanitarian assistance, care and support to their families and members of the community. In Plateau State for example, through daily purchases, market women can tell when there is likely to be crisis. In some other situations, women act as 'peace-builders' and play a reconciliatory role within the community. However, women are also known to be perpetuators of violence – as seen in some cases in the North East where besides being used as human battle shields, women and girls have played the role of suicide bombers.

The 1st NAP though helpful in highlighting the roles of women in peacebuilding and conflict did not address several core issues related to Nigerian women's engagement in peace and security processes. For instance, the 1st NAP did not address issues of radicalization, demobilization and reintegration of victims of insurgency like girls and women forced into marriages with Boko Haram members and other insurgents. The NAP also does not address post-conflict and re-integration issues such as psychosocial and trauma counselling particularly for women and children. The 24 returned Chibok girls' is a case study as the need for educational coaching to make up for the formal education skills and knowledge lost during their period in captivity was not envisaged. The Federal Ministry of Women Affairs and Social Development had to respond to this as an emergency un-budgeted assignment.

Consultations for this 2nd NAP revealed a variety of issues on conflict, peace and security for the different geo-political zones of the country. For instance, the North-East shows that Communal crisis was 50% of the problem. Child Abuse was 29%, Insurgency 12%, Drugs and human trafficking 10% and kidnapping 7%.

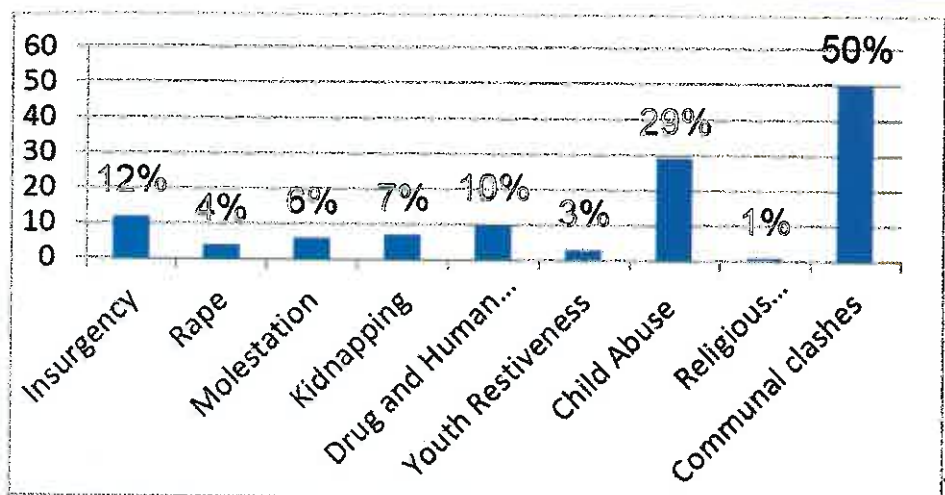

Diagram 2: Analysis of WPS issues in the NE Zone

However, it is worthy to note that, all the zonal consultation reports show that similar issues are experienced to varying degrees in the other five (5) zones. To ensure a consistent and systematic response, strategies were clustered to address issues under the following four (4) broad categories:

- ✓ Insecurity & Transnational Boarder Crimes
- ✓ Gender Responsive Inclusion in Peace & Security Architecture
- ✓ Violence Against Women, Girls & Children
- ✓ Communal Crisis

The coordination of the NAP is under the ambit of the Federal Ministry of Women Affairs and Social Development (FMWASD) with the collaboration of other agencies. To facilitate the implementation of the 1st NAP, there was a launch and training of representatives from the States and other Ministries, Departments and Agencies (MDAs) and bodies responsible for security, peace and justice. Despite the initial capacity building of stakeholders, a major challenge noted during the zonal consultations was the limited synergy and inability to work cohesively among agencies as well as civil society organizations at federal, state and local levels. The diagram below shows the knowledge level of participants prior to the meeting during the South-East consultation. 7% of the participants indicated some knowledge (seeing or hearing) of the National Action Plan while 93% had never heard or seen the NAP on UNSCR1325. Significant effort would need to be deployed to avoid such a scenario with this 2nd NAP.

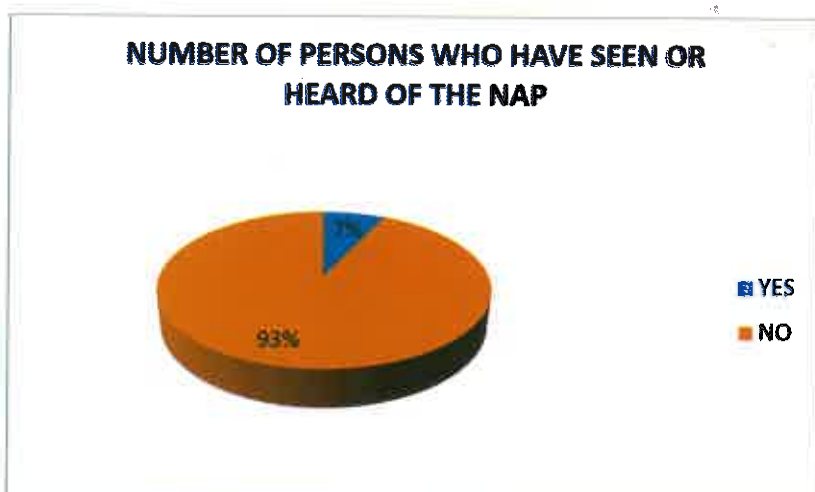

Diagram 3: Analysis of participant's knowledge of NAP in the South East Zone

2.0 ALIGNMENT WITH WOMEN, PEACE AND SECURITY (WPS) RELATED PROTOCOLS, POLICIES AND INSTRUMENTS

2.1 Linkages and Alignment with Core WPS Instruments

A central element to the success of a NAP is its ability to align with and mainstream other existing policies, protocols and instruments that seek to promote gender equality and women's participation and representation in decision-making into a common framework.

At the international level, the government of Nigeria is party to key gender equality and human rights instruments, such as the CEDAW and the Protocol on the African Charter on Human and People's Rights on the Rights of Women in Africa (2003). Such policies and instruments provide a guiding framework to move from debate to action. Captured in table 1 below is a list of relevant protocols, policies and instruments to which this 2nd NAP is aligned.

3.0 IMPLEMENTATION AND ACCOUNTABILITY FRAMEWORK OF THE NATIONAL ACTION PLAN

3.1 National and Zonal Implementation Strategies for the implementation of UNSCR 1325

Governments at National and State levels in Nigeria, Security Agents, Civil Society Organizations supported by an array of International Development Partners have instituted policies, activities and structures geared towards crisis management and peacebuilding. These efforts however, have inadvertently marginalised women on the social, economic and political levels thus limiting safe spaces and entry-points for integrating the concerns of women and girls in security mechanisms of the nation.

The National Action Plan (NAP) outlines in details, priority actions, core strategies and interventions by relevant actors, stakeholders and their responsibilities. It also provides clear indicators, M & E benchmarks and projected targets. It is anticipated that successful implementation of the NAP will enhance coordination among stakeholders, raise awareness and visibility and improve accountability among actors responsible for its implementation.

The Zonal Action Plans (ZAPs) represents a breakdown of NAP priority concerns among the six (6) geo-political zones. Due to the size and population of Nigeria, the NAP is adopting the geo-political and governance structure. Consequently, the six (6) ZAPs will enhance accountability among States within that geo-political zone. Results derived from each zone will flow into the National Action Plan outcomes. A major reason for having the ZAP is to allow for the identification of zonal peculiarities that would determine and shape the respective Action Plans of States within the Zone. For example, while the North East suffers insurgency, the South-South and South East suffer Militancy and the North-West and North Central are faced with communal crisis brought on by ethnic and Herdsmen/Farmers Clashes. The South-West on its part is faced with communal clashes resulting from land grabbing and Herdsmen's movement. Logically, the States are expected to develop State Action Plans (SAPs) derived from the ZAPs. This would enables States not only to develop workplans and programmes but more importantly, provide the tools and resources for monitoring and evaluating milestones as a way of tracking the delivery of commitments on UNSCR 1325 at the community level.

Both the NAP and ZAPs were developed after series of consultations and reflections on lessons learned and gaps identified in the implementation of the 1st NAP. The new security challenges including Insurgency, Terrorism, Violent Extremism and its fallout leading to a massive humanitarian crisis made it imperative to develop new strategies that can adequately meet Nigeria's commitment to implementing UNSCR 1325. Another major lesson from the review of the implementation of the 1st NAP is the absence of gender responsive budgeting arrangements. This explains why key actors for each of the 5 Pillars were unable to satisfactorily deliver on the planned activities. In addition, emerging security issues and trends have occasioned the formulation of five new pillars to more effectively cater for the interests of women and girls in peace and security matters.

The NAP pillars are:

- ✓ Prevention & Disaster Preparedness
- ✓ Participation & Representation
- ✓ Protection & Prosecution
- ✓ Crisis Management, Early Recovery & Post-Conflict Reconstruction
- ✓ Partnership, Coordination & Management

3.2 Operationalizing the National Action Plan UNSCR1325 (2017-2020)

The successful implementation of the NAP (2017-2020) UNSCR 1325, requires public acceptance and strong coordination mechanisms among the relevant actors charged with its implementation. Collective ownership of the plan is a fundamental requirement for its sustenance. Without prejudice to the mandates of the state and local government authorities to establish their own action plans, operationalizing the National and Zonal Action Plans requires structures for delivering interventions and coordinating activities to ensure the optimal and comprehensive execution of the NAP in all the States of the Federation.

Institutional Framework

The Federal Ministry of Women Affairs and Social Development shall provide strategic leadership and overall guidance and supervision for the implementation of UNSCR 1325. The Ministry would work closely with other key MDAs as well as civil society organizations, and the private sector to implement and deliver on the commitments to the NAP. A list of key actors critical to the successful implementation of the NAP include: Federal Ministry of Justice (FMoJ), Ministry of Defence (MoD), Office of the National Security Adviser, the Nigeria Police, National Emergency Management Agency (NEMA), Nigerian Civil Defence (NSCDC), National Refugees Commission and the Nigerian Institute for Peace and Conflict Resolution. Others include religious and traditional leaders, security sector actors, humanitarian response organizations, academics, international agencies, the private sector, media and civil society actors. These will work in concert with development partners such as the EU, DFID, UN Women, UNDP, UNICEF, UNHCR, UNFPA, UNODC, IOM and OCHA to pursue the targets outlined in the NAP.

National Technical Working Group and Sub-national NAP Organs

To ensure a seamless operation and cooperation of bodies at all levels, a National Technical Working Group (NTWG) on UNSCR 1325 NAP, chaired by the Permanent Secretary of the FMWASD would be established during the lifespan of the NAP. It will incorporate 32 members, comprising members with professional expertise in each of the five (5) core strategies which have been adopted to provide a unified implementation process as outlined in Chapter 4; and two(2) representatives from each geo-political zones. Members will be drawn from government ministries, departments, and agencies, civil society, the private sector, and the media. The State Implementation Group (SIG), will consist of members from key Ministries and institutions working on peace and security related activities in the State and will be chaired by the State Ministry of Women Affairs. The Zonal Monitoring Committee (ZMC) comprising two(2) nominees from each State in the zone, one government and one CSO, a woman peace ambassador and one technical consultant appointed by the National Technical Working Group will ensure monitoring and reporting on the ZAP.

The NTWG's central role is to provide guidance in the implementation process and assist the FMWASD/NAP Secretariat in planning and coordination. The NTWG is expected to meet quarterly every year during the lifespan of the NAP to review progress and develop mechanisms for ensuring compliance with plan measures detailed in the NAP. Recommendations of the NTWG will inform NAP advocacy, legislation and policy reform on women peace and security. Similarly the SIG will assist each State to deliver its component of the ZAP. The ZMC will meet and be hosted by each State in the zone on a rotational basis to enhance accountability, during the life-span of the NAP.

A biennial conference involving gender peace advocates, members of the NTWG, ZMCs, SIGs, members of the Local Government Action Plan Implementation Teams, Women Peace Ambassadors and key stakeholders shall be held to review progress on the NAP implementation. The objective of the conference is to provide opportunities for wide consultations on progress towards NAP targets and a platform for sharing lessons learnt and good practices in order to re-strategize for more impactful action.

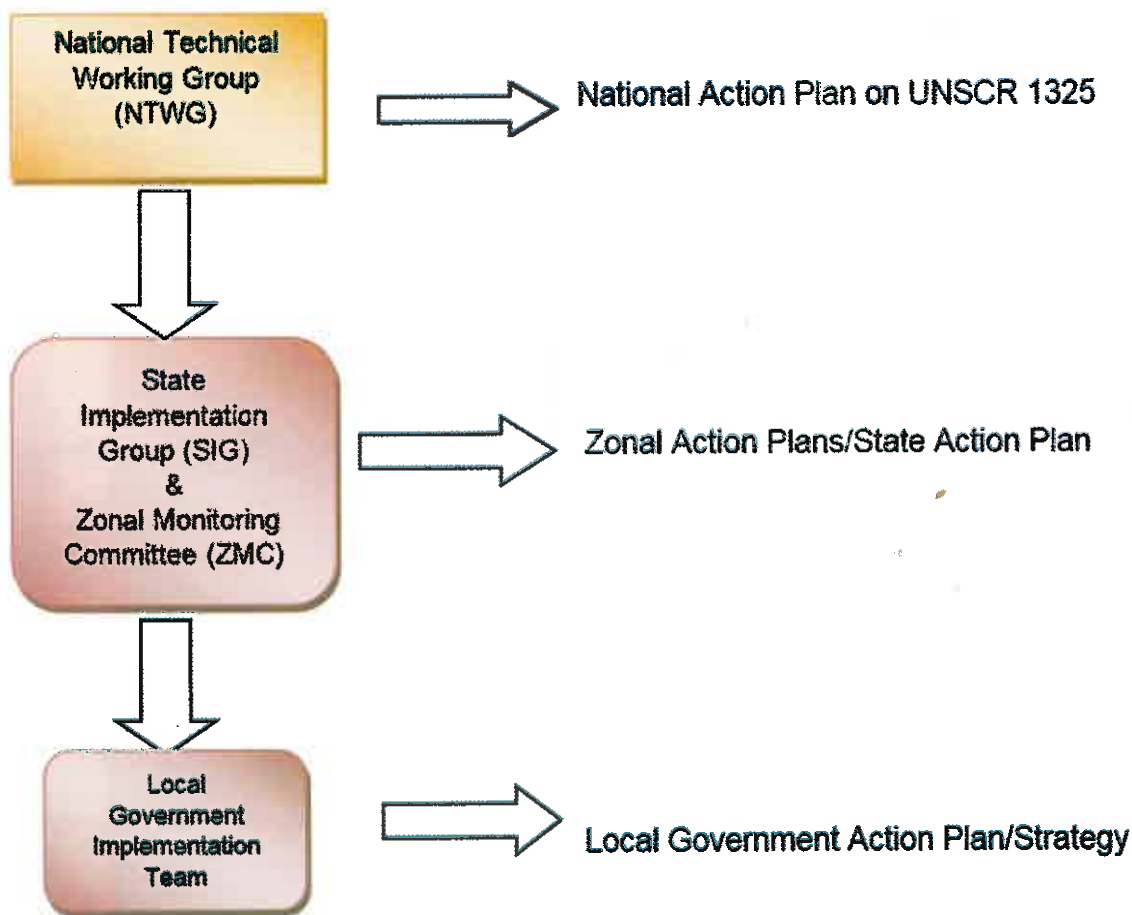

Diagram 4: National Action Plan Implementation Arrangements

Resource Mobilization

The mobilization of resources for the implementation of the NAP, ZAPs and SAPs is vital for the successful implementation of UNSCR 1325 in Nigeria. Resources required to operationalize the NAP are human/technical expertise that are financial in nature. Consequently, sectoral agencies and State governments are encouraged to ensure that statutory budgets are allocated and dedicated solely to the implementation of the National, Zonal and State Action Plans as well as Local Action Plans or Strategies on UNSCR 1325.

In addition, alliances should be cultivated with private sector institutions to implement projects linked to UNSCR 1325 as part of their Corporate Social Responsibility plans. It is expected that more UNSCR 1325 linked partnerships will be established while existing ones should be strengthened. Increased collaboration with development partners will boost the implementation of the UNSCR 1325. A good example is the "Promoting Women's Engagement in Peace and Security in Northern Nigeria" project which is sponsored by the European Union and implemented by UNWomen in partnership with the FMWASD..

3.3 Element of High Impact NAPs

Experiences from around the world have shown that the successful implementation of NAPs require that interventions on WPS have high impact on human security issues and support sustainable peace within communities. As nations have progressed to implement 2nd and 3rd generation NAPs, they have adopted more effective measures for dealing with new frontiers and emerging issues. The more successful a nation's NAP, the more flexible and responsive it is to dealing with the following frontier concerns:

1. Accountability
2. Localization
3. Human Security
4. Financing
5. New Emerging Topics e.g. Countering Violent Extremism(CVE), Climate Change, Border Security, Migration, Epidemics etc.
6. Attaining and Sustaining High Impact

Pursuing a high impact NAP has implications for achieving SDG 16 as the target s for this goal are intrinsically linked with UNSCR1325. Implementing this 2nd Nigeria NAP will require stakeholders to understand the key elements for staying on the path to a high impact NAP so that energies, resources and actions are carefully channelled using results-based principles. The key elements of high impact NAPs which must be pursued concurrently are captured in the model below.

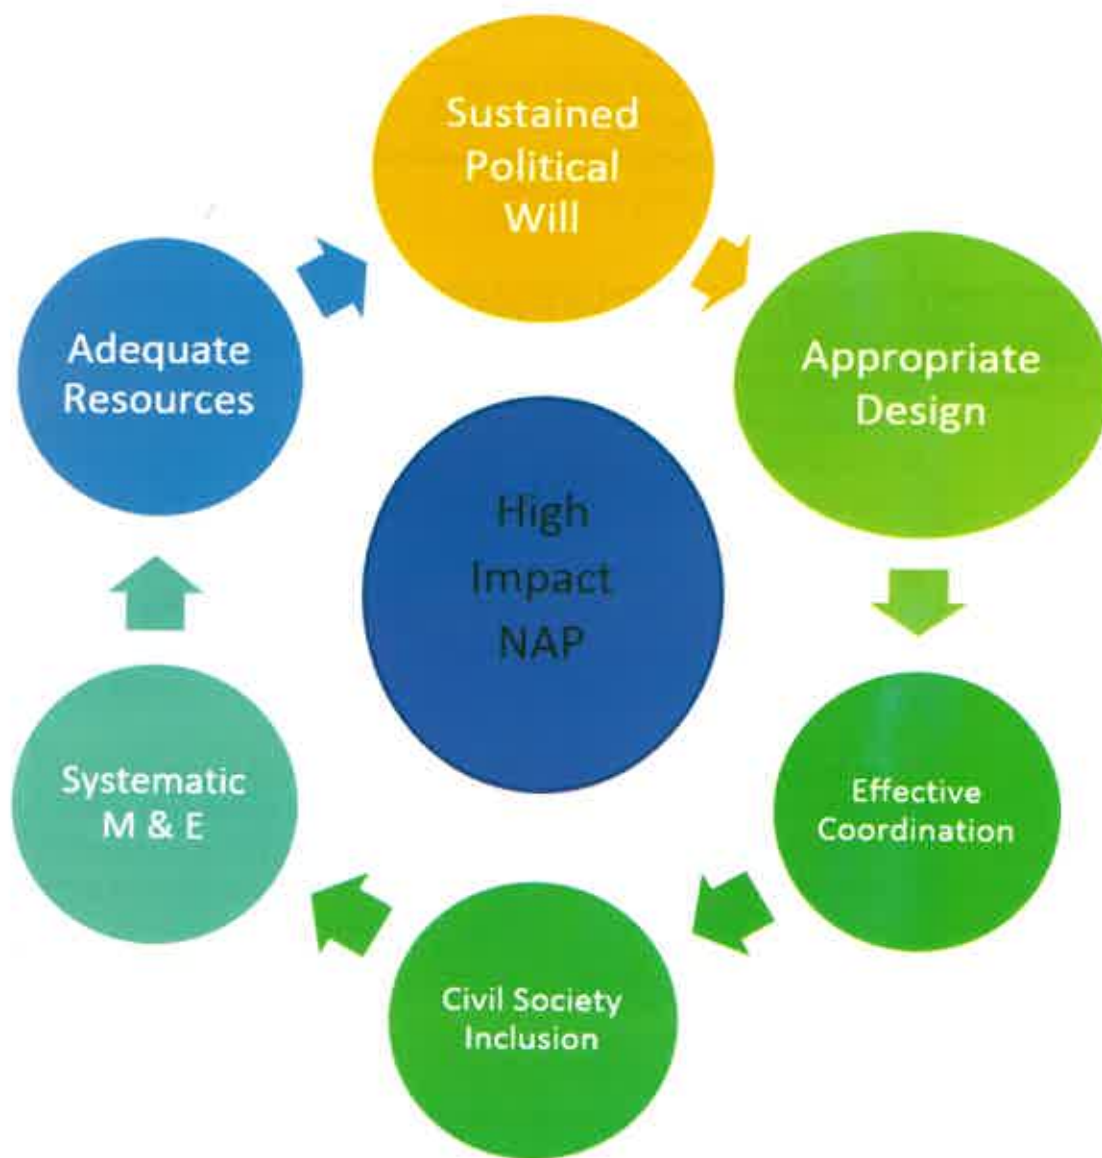

Diagram 5: Elements of High Impact NAPs

The following core strategies would allow the government of Nigeria and stakeholders adopt a unified approach for the NAP implementation in order to achieve positive outcomes for women and girls under the various pillars. The strategies are cross cutting and will be applied to all the pillars as best possible:

5.0 MONITORING, EVALUATION AND REPORTING FRAMEWORK

Monitoring and Evaluation is critical in tracking the success of any programme or policy. It paves way for learning and subsequent improvement. Monitoring and Evaluation encourages transparency and accountability which gives values in effective governance. For effective tracking of implementation of NAP, it is critical to put a clear and user-friendly monitoring and evaluation tool in place. It also helps to strengthen a sustainable system based approach through a multidimensional and gender sensitive system, which supports the continuous improvement of the state implementation process.

The monitoring and evaluation framework which also incorporates a reporting template was developed after careful consultations at zonal and national levels. The template is context-related and allows monitoring at different levels and through both formal and informal processes. It allows for the participation of key actors in women peace and security and incorporates aspects of implementation ranging from process to completion. The M&E template serves as a guide to be used at all levels such as Federal, State, LGA and Community levels.

The lifespan of NAP is three (3) years – after which it is reviewed. The National Technical Working Group (NTWG) has a critical role in the monitoring and evaluation of the plan. Responsible actors identified in the plan will report on progress during their quarterly meetings. However, reports from the local and state levels can be sent to the NAP secretariat housed in the Federal Ministry of Women Affairs. The role of credible CSOs is key in this respect. Aside from the yearly review, NAP will also be reviewed quarterly to ensure adherence to the accountability and reporting mechanisms. An observatory reporting system will go a long way towards ensuring friendly reporting mechanism, tracking cases and ensuring prosecution.

ANNEX 3: A Global Study on the Implementation of United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

To mark the fifteenth anniversary of the adoption of resolution 1325 (2000), the Security Council adopted resolution 2122 (2013) inviting the Secretary-General to conduct a review with regard to the implementation of resolution 1325. The review was to identify the gaps and challenges, as well as emerging trends and priorities for action. It requested the Secretary-general to thereafter submit a report based on the findings of this review to the Security Council in October 2015. The Secretary-General requested Radhika Coomaraswamy to be the lead author of the study on the recommendation of the United Nations Standing Committee on Women, Peace and Security. UN Women was requested to be the secretariat of the study. A High-Level Advisory Group was constituted from all regions of the world to assist Ms. Coomaraswamy.

It was decided that Ms. Coomaraswamy would lead a comprehensive study with regard to developments in the fifteen-year period since resolution 1325 was adopted. Ms. Coomaraswamy and the members of her High-Level Advisory Group held consultations with a diverse group of stakeholders, in all regions of the world. In addition, UN Women commissioned research papers for the Global Study, which will be published separately in an accompanying volume. More than 60 Member States, international and regional organizations responded to requests for submissions to the Global Study and 47 civil society organizations, academics and research institutes provided inputs via a public website. A survey of civil society organizations generated responses from 317 organizations in 71 countries.

The world has changed since the Security Council adopted resolution 1325 in October 2000. The nature of conflict in certain regions is qualitatively different, the content of what we mean by 'peace' and 'security' is evolving, and the understanding of what we mean by 'justice' has also transformed. This ever-changing and ever evolving reality poses major dilemmas for the four pillars of Security Council resolution 1325 and its subsequent resolutions: these pillars of prevention, protection, participation, and peacebuilding and recovery. It is in this context of a changing world and shifting dynamics for peace and security, that the Global Study undertakes a fifteen-year review of the implementation of resolution 1325.

Although the world has changed, there have been a number of successes in implementation over the past fifteen years.

- The international community has adopted a comprehensive normative framework with regard to sexual violence in conflict. The Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court that came into force in 2002 outlines a comprehensive list of crimes against women. Since the 1990s, international courts and tribunals have developed sophisticated jurisprudence with regard to these crimes. The Security Council has also acted decisively—a Special Representative on Sexual Violence in Conflict has been appointed by the Secretary-General to report to the Council, and a monitoring and reporting mechanism has been established at the local level to report on sexual violence against women and girls in conflict situations on the agenda of the Security Council. Commissions of Inquiry and fact-finding missions set up by the Human Rights Council increasingly have a mandate to investigate sexual and gender based violence, and a roster of experts exists within the international community to support the investigation of these international crimes.

- The international community and national governments have begun to understand the importance of national and communal healing as a part of holistic justice and accountability processes, including truth seeking, reconciliation, memorialization and reparations for women victims of violations.
- The Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women adopted General Recommendation 30 on women in conflict prevention, conflict and post-conflict situations, which provides detailed guidance to Member States on issues related to women, peace and security and the criteria for accountability, and makes clear that implementing resolution 1325 is the responsibility of every Member State.
- Between 1990 and 2000, when the Security Council adopted 1325, just 11 per cent of peace agreements signed included a reference to women. Since the adoption of resolution 1325, 27 per cent of peace agreements have referenced women. Of the six agreements resulting from peace talks or national dialogue processes supported by the UN in 2014, 67 per cent contained references relevant to women, peace and security.
- The number of senior women leaders within the UN has been on the rise, from special envoys of the Secretary-General, to the first female commander of a peacekeeping mission.
- Bilateral aid on gender equality to fragile States has quadrupled in the last decade—but from a practically non-existent level, at the start.

However, much of the progress toward the implementation of resolution 1325 continues to be measured in 'firsts,' rather than as standard practice. Obstacles and challenges still persist and prevent the full implementation of the women, peace and security (WPS) agenda.

- With regard to sexual violence, despite the comprehensive normative framework, there are very few actual prosecutions, particularly at the national level. Though some argue that the normative frameworks have deterred future crimes, others claim that there has been no significant difference for women on the ground. More research is needed to validate these claims and respond to the justice needs of victims.
- Though the participation of women in formal peace processes has been inching up, a study of 31 major peace processes between 1992 and 2011 revealed that only nine per cent of negotiators were women—a negligible figure given the issues that are involved. Only three per cent of the military in UN missions are women, and the majority of these are employed as support staff. These two areas of peacemaking and peacekeeping are among the most persistently challenging for ensuring women's equal and meaningful participation.
- Despite a great deal of effort by the international community to encourage Member States to have inclusive processes to formulate national action plans on women, peace and security, only 54 countries have formulated such action plans. Many of these plans are focused on process, with neither mechanisms for accountability nor budgets available for real implementation.
- The rise of violent extremism in many parts of the world has led to a real threat to the lives of women as well as to a cycle of militarization where women are often in an ambivalent position, rejecting the strictures on their conduct by violent extremists but wanting to protect their families and their communities from polarization and threat. Some women also become fighters and join extremist groups, some against their will but many out of real conviction. Women peacebuilders are also caught between the rising tide of extremism in their communities, and the constraints placed upon their work by counter-terrorism policies that restrict their access to critical funds and resources.
- Though there is a great deal of rhetoric supporting women, peace and security, funding for programmes and processes remains abysmally low across all areas of the agenda. Bilateral aid has increased to fragile States with regard to gender issues, but it is only still six per cent of the total aid package, and only two per cent of aid earmarked for peace and security. The quality of project-style aid also needs restructuring and re-examination.

Confronting the status quo of peace and security, the Global Study sets out detailed recommendations under every chapter and under each theme. It also concludes with a set of general recommendations for policy guidance and advocacy. Discussions and consultations with regard to the Global Study pointed to the following set of principles around which the world should unite:

- Prevention of conflict must be the priority, not the use of force. Greater attention must be paid to the prevention of conflict, and the use of force must always be the last resort when all other options have failed. The Global Study emphasizes the importance of short-term prevention measures such as early warning systems and intensified efforts at preemptive dialogue at the local, national and international levels. It also examines measures to address the root causes and structural drivers of conflict, such as exclusion, discrimination, attacks on dignity and structural inequality. These, along with measures dealing with the proliferation of small arms, violent masculinities and climate change should also be implemented.
- Resolution 1325 is a human rights mandate. It must not be forgotten that resolution 1325 was conceived of and lobbied for as a human rights resolution that would promote the rights of women in conflict situations. Any policy or programme on women, peace and security must be conducted with this in mind. Attempts to 'securitize' issues and to use women as instruments in military strategy must be consistently discouraged. The Global Study explores the role of human rights mechanisms in holding Member States accountable for human rights obligations relating to the women, peace and security agenda, including through international treaty bodies, Universal Periodic Reviews, and regional human rights courts and commissions.
- Women's participation is key to sustainable peace. This study contains research that comprehensively demonstrates that the participation of women at all levels is key to the operational effectiveness, success and sustainability of peace processes and peacebuilding efforts. Mediators, facilitators and leadership in peace operations must be proactive in including women in all aspects of peacemaking, peacekeeping and peacebuilding. The Global Study describes the substantial increase in frequency of gender-sensitive language in peace agreements, and the number of women, women's groups and gender experts who serve as official negotiators, mediators, signatories, witnesses or in advisory bodies. Nonetheless, in many conflict affected contexts, women's official participation may be temporary, their delegated roles may be more symbolic than substantive and their influential capacity may be directly resisted by cultural norms.
- Perpetrators must be held accountable and justice must be transformative. Perpetrators of grave crimes against women should be held accountable for their actions so that women receive justice and future crimes are deterred. At the same time, justice in conflict and post-conflict settings must be transformative in nature, addressing not only the singular violation experienced by women, but also the underlying inequalities which render women and girls vulnerable during times of conflict and which inform the consequences of the human rights violations they experience. The Global Study explores both the importance of fighting impunity for crimes against women through criminal justice proceedings, while also recognizing the central role played by reparations, truth and reconciliation processes and in ensuring that victims and their communities heal and recover together.

- Localization of approaches and inclusive and participatory processes are crucial to the success of national and international peace efforts. In the area of peacebuilding, there must be a detailed mapping and understanding of local conditions with the participation of women themselves before programmes are designed, formulated or implemented. The 'one-size-fits-all' policy, transferring 'best practices,' is not always what is needed in many situations of conflict. The Global Study describes the peacebuilding period as an opportunity to transform societies and work toward gender equality; to build economies and institutions that recognize and seek to address the specific challenges women face.
- Supporting women peacebuilders and respecting their autonomy is one important way to counter extremism. Across religions and regions, a common thread shared by extremist groups is that in each and every instance, their advance has been coupled with attacks on the rights of women and girls—rights to education, to public life and to decision making over their own bodies. It is clear that military responses alone are insufficient in routing out violent extremism. The Global Study explores how funding and support to women peacebuilders in contexts of rising extremism can play a critical role in ensuring that extremist ideologies neither survive nor thrive.
- All key actors must play their role. Member States, regional organizations, the media, civil society and youth all have a vital role to play in working together to implement the women, peace and security agenda, and holding one another accountable to commitments. The Global Study explores the successes and challenges that each set of actors has faced over the past 15 years, and sets expectations for carrying the WPS agenda into the future.
- A gender lens must be introduced into all aspects of the work of the Security Council. The Security Council must continue its work on the implementation of the women, peace and security agenda, and in order to do so, requires additional support and information. The Global Study explores avenues to better inform the work of the Security Council on implementation, from more robust sanctions, to more frequent briefings from civil society, to closer exchanges with the Human Rights Council, to the creation of an informal expert working group on women, peace and security.
- The persistent failure to adequately finance the women, peace and security agenda must be addressed. The failure to allocate sufficient resources and funds has been perhaps the most serious and unrelenting obstacle to implementation of women, peace and security commitments over the past 15 years. This lack of financing may be somewhat overcome if Member States, regional organizations and the UN system all commit to earmarking a minimum of 15 per cent of all funding relating to peace and security for programmes whose principal objective is to address women's specific needs and advance gender equality. The Global Study further recommends an increase in predictable, accessible and flexible funding for women's civil society organizations working on peace and security at all levels, including through dedicated financing instruments such as the new Global Acceleration Instrument on Women, Peace and Security and Humanitarian Action.

- A strong gender architecture at the United Nations is essential. The Study is clear: the United Nations must play the lead role in creating a peaceful and secure world for all of us—holding true to its original vision to turn 'swords into plowshares.' To do so, the UN must adopt structural changes to capitalize on its available resources for women, peace and security, and ensure that the entire system moves forward in a coherent and coordinated manner to bring gender equality and women's empowerment into the core of its work in all areas.

To this end, the study makes key recommendations, including the following:

- ✓ An Assistant Secretary-General, with dedicated resources, should be appointed at UN Women to deal with crises, conflict and emergencies, after a full re-appraisal of UN Women's work in headquarters and the field on women, peace and security.
- ✓ Greater resources must also be allocated to UN Women in general, to support its work in conflict settings.
- ✓ There must be a senior gender advisor at the D1 level in the office of every Special Representative of the Secretary-General, with hybrid technical gender experts in thematic units.
- ✓ The gender divisions of DPKO and DPA at headquarters should be strengthened.
- ✓ UN Women, DPKO and DPA should jointly provide technical, political and policy expertise to the gender staffing of peacekeeping and special political missions.
- ✓ There should be discussion with all stakeholders with regard to the feasibility of setting up an International Tribunal for Sexual Exploitation and Abuse by UN peacekeepers and UN staff in the field. This issue remains the major controversy that brings the UN, and the entire international community, into disrepute in the eyes of public opinion.

The Global Study concludes, not with a recommendation, but with a call to action. The great changes we are undergoing must primarily be understood in the context of the needs and concerns of women in specific situations of conflict. The 'local' must clearly be the most important factor in our analysis. Nevertheless, women spoke with one voice from every continent to convey a key message to the Security Council: The United Nations must take the lead in stopping the process of militarization and militarism that began in 2001 in an ever-increasing cycle of conflict. The normalization of violence at the local, national and international levels must cease. Networks of women peacebuilders and peacemakers must be expanded and supported to come to the fore. Their solidarity is essential if we are to move the world toward the original vision of the United Nations, where nations turn their 'swords into plowshares' and act with conviction to prevent wars through dialogue and discussion.

Background

The United Nations Security Council resolution 1325, unanimously passed by the Security Council on the 31st of October 2000 is the first of eight resolutions on “Women, Peace and Security” (WPS). It builds on a body of international human rights law and legal instruments. UNSCR 1325 is a ground -breaking resolution which recognizes that armed conflict impacts women differently from men. It demands protection of women and girls during armed conflict and post conflict situations. The resolution recognizes women's role as peace builders and agents of change and calls on UN and member states, civil society and the international community to ensure that women participate in conflict prevention, peace negotiations and all peace processes, reconstruction decisions and programs.

The UNSCR 1325 stresses that peace is inextricably linked with equality between women and men and affirms the equal access and full participation of women in power structures and in all efforts geared towards peace and security. The resolution is rooted in the premise that women's inclusion, participation in the process, their perspectives and contributions to the crucial dialogues will improve the chances of attaining viable and sustainable peace. The resolution is also rooted in the knowledge that gender equality itself is a source of sustainable peace.

Presidential Statements (S/PRST/2004/40 and S/PRST/2005/52) calls on Member States to implement the resolution through the development of National Action Plans (NAPs), or the adoption of other national level strategies. NAP serves as a tool for government to articulate priorities and coordinate the implementation of UNSCR 1325 at the national and state level. It serves as a guiding national policy document that captures the diverse actors among government bodies, international development partners, civil society organizations tasked with security, foreign policy, development and gender equality.

The National Technical Working Group (NTWG) was established to provide technical guidance and oversight for the implementation of NAP 1325. The group's central role is to provide guidance in the implementation process and assist the FMWASD/Secretariat in planning and coordination. The NTWG is expected to meet quarterly every year during the lifespan of the NAP to review progress and develop mechanisms for ensuring the compliance as detailed in the NAP. Recommendations of the NTWG will inform NAP advocacy, legislation and policy on women peace and security.
